

Clenny O'Dell Rhea told the family that she had either a brother or uncle who was buried at the Battle of Little Big Horn. He was an Indian Scout for the US Army, his indian name is currently unknown.

Here is the list of Indian Scouts listed on the monument:

Lonesome Charley Reynolds, Chief Scout

Isaiah Dorman, Negro-Indian Interpreter

Indian Scouts

Mitch Bouyer, half-breed

Bloody Knife

Bob-Tailed Bull

Little Brave

Another point of confusion: W.A. Graham names the Ree scouts killed at the Little Bighorn as Bloody Knife (a guide, actually), Bobtailed Bull and Stab, but Stab apparently didn't die in the battle. Hardorff and most recent writers name the third dead Ree scout as Little Brave, but the name Little Brave isn't even on Graham's list of Arikara scouts. You get the idea.

Ree is apparently a shortened name for the Arikara tribe.